Historic Overview:

The Ginsburg house was designed by Nettleton & Kahn and is an example of the English Renaissance style, typical of Albert Kahn's early commissions. The building is 2 ½-stories tall built of brick and stone. Window and door openings have stone quoin surrounds. A carved wood arcade resting on a stone wall comprises the ¾-width hipped roof porch.

The original owner of the house, Bernard Ginsburg was an important figure in philanthropy, civic service, and the Jewish community during the 19th and 20th centuries¹.
